Cold Weather Brings Catarrh.

Though the disagreeable effects of Catarrh are felt all the year round, cold and disagreeable weather aggravates the disease and it is during the winter season that its severest form is felt. Each succeeding year seems to intensify the disease, so that it gradually fastens its hold upon the sufferer with a grasp that becomes firmer each season.

Catarrh often appears as only a cold at first, and is hardly noticed. But gradually the cold returns, and it is more difficult to cure, and stays longer than formerly. These symptoms cannot be mistaken; they mark the first appearance of a disease that will develop in severity and stubbornness, and which it is impossible to cure with the local treatment of sprays, washes, and similar applications. Being a disease of the blood, only a blood remedy can have the slightest effect upon it. S.S.S. (Swift's Specific) is the only cure for Catarrh, because it is the only blood remedy which goes to the seat of all obstinate and deep-seated cases, and forces out the disease.

Mr. T. A. Williams, a leading merchant of Spartanburg, S. C., writes:

THE ELECTION

Van Wyck Elected Mayor of New York.

Both Leading Parties Claiming the Ohio Legislature.

Gov. Bushnell Re-Elected by a Majority of About 26,000.

Shackelford is Elected Clerk of the Kentucky Court of Appeals by a Handsome Majority—Democrats Will Control the Kentucky Legislature.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4.—The result of the elections in Ohio is still in doubt. With more complete returns Wednesday night, it is evident that it will require the official count to satisfy the contestants. The more the respective parties hold on to their returns, the smaller their claim to increase in opposite directions. The closeness of the vote has caused intense feeling and the usual cry of fraud. When the result was in doubt in 1885 it was discovered that the tally sheets were forged. Tuesday night the republicans telegraphed to all their county committees to beware of the frauds of 1885. And when the republicans were claiming the legislature by one or two majority on joint ballot, the democrats telephoned their county committees to prepare for all sorts of fraud, and to remember that it was by a majority of one by which the great crime of 1887 was committed that defeated Tilden. The state headquarters will be kept open all week, until the official counts are made in all of the 88 counties of the state. It is expected that there will be trouble in some of the close counties. There will no doubt be much agitation in all of them Wednesday.

HON. ASA S. BUSHNELL.
Re-Elected Governor of Ohio.

Meantime the managers at both the democratic and the republican state headquarters were Wednesday claiming the state. The democrats claim the election of Chapman for governor and their state ticket on such a close margin that it will require the official figures to determine the plurality.

Chairman McConville claims that the democrats will have a majority of seven in the legislature on joint ballot for senator. He says the republicans are claiming counties that are doubtful and others that the democrats have carried by small pluralities.

The republicans claim that Bushnell, for governor, and the rest of the republican state ticket has been elected from 50,000 to 8,000 plurality, and that the republicans will have a majority on joint ballot of the legislature. The republicans concede that they will not have a majority in the state senate which would prevent the passage of what are known as "Rippers" or any other partisan legislation. The republicans claim 17 of the 36 senators with 18 conceded to be democrats and one doubtful. They claim 57 members of the house, conceding 48 to the democrats with four doubtful. If the democrats should secure all of these five doubtful members the republicans still claim a majority of two on joint ballot.

Last Wednesday afternoon the republicans conceded the election of the democratic representative in Wood county and changed their figures so that they now claim only a majority of one in the legislature on joint ballot for senator. The Evening Dispatch indicates from Wood county, change its table so as to give the republicans only one majority on joint ballot as follows: Senate, 17 republicans, 19 democrats; house, 56 republicans, 53 democrats; totals, 73 republicans, 72 democrats.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 4.—The Plain Dealer democratic, in an extra edition Wednesday morning, gives Bushnell a plurality of 4,833 in this, Cuyahoga county, and says he will have a plurality not to exceed 10,000 in the state. It is conceded that the entire republican legislative ticket for this district as well as the republican county ticket, is elected by small pluralities.

Wednesday afternoon the democratic state committee no longer claimed the election of their state ticket, but announced that their majority in the legislature on joint ballot will not be less than six and may possibly be nine as predicted earlier in the day by Chairman McConville. Chairman Nash Wednesday afternoon stated that the republican plurality on joint ballot for senator. Among the doubtful ones has been Deleware county, which reported Wednesday afternoon the election of the republican representative by 20 plurality.

The democratic state committee Wednesday afternoon gave out the following:

"We have carried the following senatorial districts:

"Williams district, 2; Lucas, 3; Miami, 1; Butler, 1; Ottawa, 1; Seneca, 1; Marion, 1; Licking, 1; Knox, 1; Tuscarawas, 1; Hamilton, 4; Franklin, 2; total, 20."

"We have carried the following counties sure for the legislature:"

"Franklin, 3; Hamilton, 10; Lucas, 2; Licking, 2; Summit, 2; Adams, 1; Pike, 1; Allen, 1; Ashland, 1; Huron, 1; Butler, 1; Clermont, 1; Coshocton, 1; Crawford, 1; Darke, 1; Delaware, 1; Fairfield, 1; Hardin, 1; Hancock, 1; Hocking, 1; Vinton, 1; Kossuth, 1; Marion and Morrow, 1; Mercer, 1; Monroe, 1; Ottawa, 1; Putnam, 1; Perry, 1; Pickaway, 1; Putnam, 1; Sandusky, 1; Shelby, 1; Tazewawas, 1; Van Wert, 1; Wayne, 1; Williams, 1; Wood, 1; Wyandot, 1; each, total 54."

The following counties are in doubt: Belmont, Erie, Guernsey, Madison, Morgan, Muskingum, Noble, Preble, Stark, Union, one each, Cuyahoga 9; Mahoning 2; total 21.

On these claims the democrats would have a 71 on joint ballot, 73 being necessary for a choice of United States senator. Of the 21 members in doubt the democrats claim they will secure a majority.

When the democratic state committee put Cuyahoga county, the home of Senator Hanna, in the doubtful list, special efforts were made by the republicans to get the vote on each of the 12 members from that county. On the returns received the republicans claim that their lowest candidate for the legislature in Cuyahoga county has a plurality of 56 and that the average of the 12 members is 1,500.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4.—Wednesday night the democratic state committee announced no definite claims on the legislature, and the republican state committee raised its claims to a majority of five on joint ballot as follows:

Senate, 17 republicans, 19 democrats; house, 58 republicans, 51 democrats; totals, 75 republicans, 70 democrats. Wood county had been conceded to the democrats until Wednesday night, when the complete returns caused the republicans to claim it. On the returns complete at republican state headquarters, the democrats will have a majority of two in the senate and the republicans of seven in the house. In this claim the fusionists from Cincinnati are all counted as democratic. The republicans can organize the house without fusion. There is only one of the four senators elected on the fusion ticket in Cincinnati who is a republican, and he becomes a factor. If Senator Volney of Cincinnati, who is a republican, voted on the fusion ticket, should vote with the republicans on the organization of the senate or on anything else, he will be a tie with Lieut. Gov. Jones, republican, having the deciding vote. If the democrats had secured a majority of the legislature or the fusionists held the balance of power, it is said that the fusionists would have voted with the democrats.

The republicans now expect two or more of the fusion republicans to vote with them for senator, in which event they claim a majority of seven on joint ballot, with 77 republicans and 68 democrats. None of the fusion votes for senator were counted on by the republican managers in event they would be needed to have many speculations are made about the fusion votes.

There is an active movement which is the rumor that Gov. Bushnell will be brought out for senator against Marcus A. Hanna. Gov. Bushnell and all others involved in this movement deny all knowledge of it, or that they would have anything to do with it.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 4.—Gov. Bushnell arrived home Wednesday evening. On learning of his return an impromptu parade was immediately formed and headed by a band, marched to the Bushnell mansion. Thousands of citizens crowded on the lawn and were addressed by the governor from the porch. He thanked them for their cordial greeting and said his victory was significant, as it was the second time in 30 years he had gone republican in the first election after a presidential election. He believed the result will increase confidence in the greater activity in business. Ohio will sound the key note in national politics for the next ten years. After the speech a display of fireworks was made on fountain square.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4.—It was reported here Wednesday night that a number of republicans have pledged themselves not to go into caucus or to vote for Hanna anywhere at any circumstances. It is stated upon good authority that Gov. Bushnell will be the choice of the opposition for senator. This movement will have the support of Lieut. Gov. Jones and his friends, as he will succeed Gov. Bushnell.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4.—Unofficial but complete returns show republican plurality of 26,520 in Ohio. Both sides still claim majority of the legislature, republicans by five, democrats by three majority.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 4.—The county fusion ticket, with the exception of infirm director, has been elected in Hamilton county by a majority estimated at from 2,000 to 3,000. The vote on governor, Bushnell, r., 41,121; Chapman, d., 36,911. Gov. Bushnell ran a long way ahead of his ticket, closely followed by Capt. Monroe. Very little scratching appears to have been done, and aside from the votes cast for Gov. Bushnell, the straight ticket seems to have been voted, with few exceptions.

The complete returns show that, in addition to the majority given to Gov. Bushnell, Candidate Menz, on the republican ticket for county infirm director, will be elected by a majority of about 1,000.

KENTUCKY.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 4.—Chairman Johnson of the democratic executive committee, said to a reporter at noon Wednesday that Shackelford, the democratic candidate for clerk of the court of appeals, is elected by not less than 16,000 majority. Of 19 state senators elected Tuesday Chairman Johnson claims 14 are democratic. They hold over till 1900, when a successor of United States Senator Lindsay will be chosen. Ex-Senator Blackburn announced his candidacy Wednesday to succeed Lindsay.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 4.—The headquarters of the democratic state chairman were not open Wednesday night and no returns were received. There is little interest in the size of Shackelford's majority, as it is conceded to be somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000. The democrats have won or increased their vote everywhere. The issues are local, free silver not being an issue in any race from the west to the highest. The efforts at fusion between the republicans and the democrats in local contests have failed singularly, chiefly because the Negroes would not support the fusion tickets, a large portion of them, it is charged, selling their vote to the democrats or staying away from registration or from the polls for pay. The democrats have secured a good majority in the legislature, but as a senator is not to be elected until after another election is held for representatives Blackburn's election to succeed Senator Lindsay may not be accomplished, although Blackburn is jubilant over the victory of his party and very hopeful of again being returned to the senate. Blackburn is said to be especially joyful over the defeat of the gold standard candidate from his own county. Henry L. Martin, who stood by him in the legislature, so faithfully, in two previous elections, drew out senatorial contests. Coeboel, state senator from the Covington district, a gold standard man, who posed as a silverite and led Blackburn's fight for re-election, goes to the senate again but by a small margin. The national democratic's candidate for appellate court clerk, Hindman, got fewer votes than expected as the gold standard democrats on account of fusion with republicans, generally voted for the republican candidates, thus reducing the silverite majority.

SAMUEL J. SHACKELFORD.
Elected Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

DEMOCRATIC Mayor at Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 2.—A conservative estimate 11 o'clock Tuesday night places the majority of Charles P. Weaver, democratic candidate for mayor, over George D. Todd, the present incumbent, at from 3,000 to 3,500. The entire democratic ticket is undoubtedly elected in.

Contrary to the expectations of many the election was a comparatively quiet one. There was not a great deal of scratching and the minor personal issues were lost sight of when the votes came to decide on those involved in the struggle between the leaders. There is no doubt about the constitutional amendment carrying in Louisville.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 3.—A large number of counties of Kentucky being inaccessible to telegraph or telephone, returns are so delayed that it is difficult to give a positive result on the only state office contested for, that of clerk of court of appeals. However, enough is known to show that Mr. Bell, the republican nominee, has made a splendid race, but the latest indications are that Shackelford, the freshman democratic nominee, will be elected by 6,000. Mr. Hindman, the national democratic, got a slight vote, and Mr. Parker, the populist candidate, carried the strength of his party.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The result of the election in Greater New York was a complete victory for the Tammany city, borough and county tickets. Robert A. Van Wyck, head of the city ticket, was elected mayor of the greater New York by a plurality of 87,308. Each of the five boroughs contributed to the total.

Seth Low, the "Citizen" as Union candidate for mayor, was elected as assemblyman from Brooklyn, and the other four assembly districts and counties were carried by the Tammany forces. Mr. Low was, as well ahead of Gen. Tracy, the republican nominee, who was second in the race. Low polled 146,142 votes, Tracy 101,012.

Hon. George C. Taylor, 20,932 votes, and John W. Quinn, 14,000 votes, Tracy 101,012.

The returns are that the republicans have won in South Dakota. Smith (rep.) is elected judge in the First district by a close vote. In the Second and Jones (rep.) is probably elected by 400 majority, overcoming an adverse majority in 1896 of 1,050. Smith (rep.) in the Fourth district is elected. The election of Campbell (rep.) in the Fifth district is claimed by 1,200 majority. Gaffey (rep.) is elected in the Sixth. The result in the Third is in doubt. The populists have probably carried one district, the Eighth, and Wilson (rep.) is leading in the Seventh.

DEBT INCREASED

Over Eight Million Dollars During October—Report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The monthly statement of the public debt shows that at the close of business on October 30, 1897, the debt less cash in the treasury amounted to $1,020,669,961, an increase for the month of $8,441,188. This increase is principally accounted for by a decrease in the amount of cash on hand.

The debt is recapitulated as follows: Interesting bearing debt $847,365,500. Debt on which interest has ceased since maturity, $1,831,540. Debt bearing no interest, $379,623,500.

Total, $1,228,820,600.

This amount, however, does not include $59,456,953 in certificates and treasury notes outstanding, which are offset by an equal amount of cash in the treasury.

The cash in the treasury is classified as follows: Gold, $190,357,256; silver, $500,351,943; papers, $113,441,000; bonds, disbursing officers' balance, etc., $18,489,756; total, $831,669,957, against which there are demand liabilities amounting to $623,913,857, leaving the net cash balance in the treasury $207,756,000.

The report of the commissioner of internal revenue for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1897, shows the total receipts from all sources to have been $146,619,593, a decrease as compared with the fiscal year 1896, of $31,022.

Important changes in consumption are an increase of $1,338,473 in the receipts from distilled spirits, as compared with 1896, and a decrease of practically the same amount in the receipts from fermented liquors. The cost of collection for the last fiscal year was $5,848,669, a decrease over 1896 of $237,822.

The total production of distilled spirits, exclusive of fruit brandies during the last fiscal year was 62,465,648 taxable gallons, a decrease in production as compared with 1896 of 24,203.

There were also produced 298,921 gallons of apple brandy, 17,251 of peach brandy, 1,496,986 of grape brandy, and varying amounts of other fruit brandies, making a total of 1,818,427 gallons, or an aggregate decrease of 1,590,425. The quantity of distilled spirits gauged was 246,096,921 gallons, a decrease of 23,237,841 gallons.

During the year 3,158 distilleries of all kinds were operated, a decrease of 3,029.

There were produced 34,428,823 barrels of beer, a decrease as compared with 1896, of 1,396,428 barrels. The receipts from the taxes on tobacco, cigars, cigarettes, etc., were $30,710,279, a decrease of $1,331.

UNION PACIFIC ROAD

Sold to the Reorganization Committee for $57,564,932.76.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 2.—The Union Pacific road property, including the building and all that goes to operate the system, was Monday morning sold to the reorganization committee for $38,528,522.76. This amount does not include the sinking fund in the hands of the government, and taking this to be $4,036,400, the amount stated in the government decree covering the sale of the road, the total paid for the property was $57,564,932.76.

There were no other bidders, and the road went to the reorganization committee without any opposition.

The sale of the road was in itself one of the most tame and uninteresting performances possible to imagine.

The crowd, which was not over 500 all told, was packed so closely around the doorway and up in front of the center of the bulletin that the members of the reorganization committee, the men who came out to buy the road, were unable to see anything or hear a word of what was going on.

FRANKFORT RIOT.

Three White Men Killed and Several Whites and Blacks Wounded.

Deputy Sheriff Deakens and Frank Egbert and Howard Glore, Republican politicians, among the dead—Wm. Smith, one of the wounded, May Die.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 3.—Three white men dead, two white men and several negroes wounded, one fatally, sums up the result of an early morning riot here.

It was the result of the silver Democrats' alleged attempt to corral town negroes in a bull pen outside of the town, and the determination of the Republican workers that it should not be done.

The white men who had been to the country to finish the alleged corraling of the Negroes were headed by democrats. They were returning to town in a vehicle driven by William Smith, when on the hill above town they were met by a party of republicans, headed by Frank Egbert, Howard Glore and others. It was here the first battle occurred at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Egbert commanded the vehicle to halt. Smith was driving. Behind him was Ben Marshall, a brother-in-law of Egbert, but of the other party. Marshall told Smith to drive on. He did so and Egbert shot his legs to pieces as the horse went on and took the party into town.

There was indiscriminate shooting there for a few minutes and the first battle ended.

Egbert and his party followed the Marshall-Brawner party into town. Here the democrats were surrounded by their friends and the Egbert party came on with more friends and spectators till all were on the principal street-crossing in the middle of the city.

It was 2 o'clock. Deputy Sheriff R. E. Deakens went up to Egbert and told him to surrender. His reply was a fusillade from his revolver that instantly killed Deakens.

Egbert himself fell dead, and there is a difference of opinion as to whether he was killed by the deputy sheriff, as the latter fell, or by a rifle in the hands of one of his brothers-in-law or by friends of the opposing democratic party.

Many shots were fired during this second battle. When the smoke cleared away Egbert and Deakens were dead.

Walter Goins, a bystander, a cripple, was shot through the leg. Charley Boone, colored, was shot through the right lung.

On the hill above town near where the first battle occurred, there was found at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning the dead body of Howard Glore, who went out with Egbert's party to break up the Negro bull pen, and who must have been killed when Egbert attempted to stop the party and shot Smith, the driver. The latter's legs were shattered. One of them was amputated.

The other will have to be amputated, and it is probable that Smith will be added to the list of the dead before many hours.

MUCH OFFENSE

Given the Spanish Government by Ex-Minister Taylor's Magazine Article.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—A special to the World from Madrid, Spain, says: Something of a sensation has been caused in Madrid by telegrams from America, epitomizing an article on Cuba written for an American magazine by former Minister Taylor.

The Spaniards are particularly annoyed because Mr. Taylor has obtained from their own contemporary data in the daily press and from utterances of their statesmen all his information about lack of honesty in the elections and in the parliamentary government, and about notorious abuses in their home administration even at the capital.

The conclusion Mr. Taylor draws from such premises in favor of American intervention for the settlement of the Cuban question has given much offense at court and in official and political circles because it is deemed calculated to counteract the favorable impression the Spanish note had made in the highest circles at Washington, including the president and his cabinet, according to telegrams received by the Madrid press and the official dispatches from Minister Dupuy de Lome to the cabinet.

Some Spanish papers affect to make light of Mr. Taylor's statements, and say that they will not alter the effects of the Spanish note, which has skillfully warded off, for the time, the action by the American government, which was hinted at in Minister Woodfoult's note of September 28 and which made out so strong a case on grounds of international law against toleration of filibustering expeditions and against moral and material assistance being given to the insurgents from the United States.

The imperial says the Spanish government will take steps to counteract the effects of Mr. Taylor's article upon public opinion and the government in America.

The Election In Other States.

IN Greater New York complete returns show Van Wyck's plurality over Seth Low for Mayor of Greater New York to be 81,548. The new General Assembly stands eighty-five Republicans and sixty-eight Democrats. Mayor-elect Van Wyck, of Greater New York, in an interview announces as his policy that "liberty must be restored to the citizen and the pillage of public money must cease."

In Ohio Republicans are claiming the Legislature on joint ballot by five votes. The Legislature refuses to concede this, and declare they have it by one vote. Three counties have not been heard from, and in these both sides are claiming to have elected their candidate.

On the second page are printed dispatches from the respective states holding elections. Pictures are also given of Governor Brushell, of Ohio, Mayor-elect Van Wyck, of New York, and of Mr. Shackelford, of Kentucky.

GOSSIPY PARAGRAPHS.

Theatrical And Otherwise—Remarks In The Foyer.

"DEVIL'S AUCTION."

Manager Chas. H. Yale, of the "Devil's Auction," which has been noted for its clever "specialty" features, has fairly outdone himself in this season's production of that famous show-piece, to be seen to-night at the opera house, and offers as new novelties the following: Colby and Dewitt, comic acrobats in "The Organ Grinder" and the Monkey," the Phantos-Aerial Grotesques, Mlle. Flora, the Tough Girl on the wire, Brown and Harrison, comedy farceurs, and Mayme Mayo, a bright and clever singer, dancer and banjoist and Harry M. Brown, in a novel single specialty. Among the new scenic features are: "The Cavern of Gigantic Heads," "The Magic Vaults of Benedictine," "The Gardens of the Blue Dragon," "The Palace of Roses" and a magnificent transformation scene of eight distinct changes.

"ISLE OF CHAMPAGNE."

"The Isle of Champagne," a beautiful comic opera which fairly bubbles with tuneful airs and sparkling mirth, will be the attraction at the Paris Grand Opera House Tuesday night. Richard Golden, the well-known comedian, will be seen in the leading comedy role which was played by Thos. Q. Seabrooke when the opera was first given here. The "Isle of Champagne" performance will very likely be quite a social event.

Edwin Travers, supported by a capable company, presented that very amusing farce, "A Jolly Night" in a clever manner Tuesday night at the opera house. The curtain raiser, "Forget-me-nots," was a very pretty little piece. The performance was well received by the audience.

Ben Rosenfield, stage-manager of the Seymour (Ind.) opera house, was the leading actor in a tragedy Tuesday. When Ethel Tucker refused to marry him he asked her to step on the stage and kiss him. She did so, and then he shot himself.

George Thatcher, one of the veterans of negro minstrelsy, has retired from the stage to become the landlord of a New York road-house.

A Paducah bride kissed all six of the groomsmen the other day, and the bridesmaids tied the score by all kissing the groom.

Joseph Jefferson's impersonation of Rip Van Winkle was witnessed by 25,000 people in Boston week before last.

PROMOTED FOR GALLANTRY.

A New York Policeman Rewarded For Catching a Burglar.

Hon. Theodore Roosevelt writes an article entitled "The Roll of Honor of the New York Police" for the Century. Mr. Roosevelt says:

Early in our term we promoted a patrolman to the grade of roundsman for activity in catching a burglar under rather peculiar circumstances. I happened to note his getting a burglar one week. Apparently he had fallen into the habit, for he got another the next week. In the latter case the burglar escaped from the house soon after midnight and ran away toward Park avenue, with the policeman in hot chase. The New York Central railroad runs under Park avenue, and there is a succession of openings in the top of the tunnel. Finding that the policeman was gaining on him, the burglar took a desperate chance and leaped down one of these openings at the risk of breaking his neck. Now the burglar was running for his liberty, and it was the part of wisdom for him to imperil life or limb, but the policeman was merely doing his duty, and nobody could have blamed him for not taking the jump. However, he jumped, and in this particular case the hand of the Lord was heavy upon the unrighteous. The burglar had the breath knocked out of him, and the "cop" didn't. When his victim could walk, the officer trotted him around to the station house, and a week afterward he himself was promoted, it appearing upon careful investigation that he was sober, trustworthy and strictly attentive to his duty.

Here again it seems to me that we followed that eminently common sense plan of promoting a man who had earned his promotion by faithful and distinguished service and by proved superior capacity. We cared no more for the policeman's views on the tariff or the currency than we did for those of the burglar. Our interest and the interest of citizens generally was to have the officer catch that burglar and otherwise do his duty. If he did his duty, we were for him; if he did not, we were against him. In neither event did we care whether the officer had or had not the backing of the congressional delegation of the city or the central committee of the county. Of course, as before, this exposed us to wild outcries from the local political bosses and heelers and much sneering at "civil service reform," but all the outcries and sneers meant was that we were doing our duty as decent men and as public officials, with some slight appreciation of what was implied by the words honor and uprightness. Political organizations are eminently necessary and useful, but when they are seized by professional spoils politicians of low morality, who run the "machine" in their own interests, who clamor against honesty and defy decency and rail against that device for obtaining clean government which is known as civil service reform, then it is time for all citizens who believe in good citizenship to rise in revolt.

The Toposcope.

In the loftiest tower in the city of Vienna there is a novel instrument, known as the toposcope, constantly attended day and night, for the purpose of locating fires. It consists of a good telescope, which is solidly attached to an arrangement of levers, while graduated sections of a circle are arranged horizontally and vertically in such a way that the moving of the telescope sideways or up or down results in a change of position of the hands attached to the levers in reference to the graduated scales. Thus, the stability of the apparatus being assured by the firmness of the fastening, whenever the telescope is focused upon the same object the hands will point to the same figures on the horizontal and on the vertical sextant, and since no index of the whole city has been made it is but a matter of a few seconds, when a glare is discovered at night, to direct upon the spot the toposcope on the side, to read off the numbers, to look up the object and to telegraph to the central station the detail's observed. Local conditions are, of course, necessary for the successful operation of such an apparatus, but in this case they are said to be almost perfect. The tower is over 500 feet high, and an uninterrupted view of the great area of the city is thus possible to the watcher if the atmospheric conditions are favorable.

Managing Widow.

A certain young widow of Indianapolis, who has just changed her weeds for brighter hues, gave a dinner party not long ago, says the Indianapolis Sentinel. The rooms were decorated with a great profusion of flowers. Roses in masses were on the mantels, and the dinner table fairly blossomed. In fact, the abundance of flowers was unusual. One of the guests could restrain her curiosity no longer, and when the dessert was brought in said:

MONARCH OF ENGLAND.
Austrian Archdeaconess Is the Legitimate Sovereign.

In France and in Spain the legitimist is taken seriously. In England, according to the man in the street, and according to others in other places, the legitimist is simply an idiot who is not worth further consideration. Yet among English legitimists are many men of whose sanity there can be no question, whose integrity is beyond dispute, and whose loyalty to Queen Victoria is unimpeachable.

In the first place, perhaps, it may be suggested that the use of the word "Jacobite" in connection with legitimism in this country is not very happy. It is employed because of the historical associations which appeal so strongly to the English as a nation. But it does not necessarily imply, as is too commonly supposed, that the legitimists in this country aim solely at the restoration of the house of Stuart. But for the peculiar local associations of the term "Jacobite," the legitimist in England might with more propriety style himself a Carlist, and thereby identify himself more closely with his brother in France or Spain. The point, which in fairness ought not to be lost sight of, is that the Jacobite is simply an Englishman who professes the faith of legitimism; a member, it may be otherwise expressed, of the English branch of a catholic or universal party.

Social systems may and do exist where the monarchical principle is accepted, but where the sovereign is elected. Social systems may and do exist where the principle of primogeniture is accepted, but where the monarchical principle is rejected altogether. But a social system where the monarchical principle and the principle of primogeniture are both accepted, but where the sovereign is yet not the one entitled by the laws of primogeniture to occupy the throne, is an anomaly the justification of which must be sought outside logical reason. From this aspect the legitimist appears more sane than they who call him mad. The law of gavelkind and the law "regulating" the succession to the throne are the only two exceptions to the rule by which the eldest son succeeds his father, and, failing issue, the succession is vested in the elder female line. Questions of fact only are involved, and fortunately these are plain enough. By the law of primogeniture the sovereign of these realms should be Mary the Fourth and Third, nee Mary Theresa Henrietta Dorothea, archduchess of Austria-Este-Modena, and wife of his royal highness Prince Louis of Bavaria. Of her genealogical right to the throne as representative of the senior female line of the royal house of Stuart, the male line having become extinct on the death of the Cardinal King Henry IX., there is no dispute. The facts are stated every year in "Whitaker's Almanack" for all who run to read. The Hanoverian dynasty, being derived from a daughter of James I., has no right to the throne until the whole issue of Charles I. is exhausted, which is not yet the case.—Nineteenth Century.

IMITATION OYSTERS IN PARIS.

A Perfect Counterfeit in Appearance, But the Taste is Far from Genuine.

"The most singular thing I saw while in Paris," said a gentleman who has just returned from Europe, "was an artificial oyster. I don't mean what are called mock oysters—that is, meat done up in a patty or a potpie—but the real bivalve intended to serve raw. And as far as looks go, you would say at a glance that they were genuine American oysters, but when you came to eat one the difference would be perceptible at once. How they are made and what materials are used in their manufacture is a mystery which I did not solve, but it is certain that a great deal of money is made by the producers. The usual price paid for these artificial oysters is three cents each, or 30 cents a dozen, and sometimes, in the second-class restaurants, they are to be had for two cents each, though they are not apt to be very fresh at that price. You order a plate on the half shell, and when the waiter brings them to you they look as nice as the real oyster that you get in the best New York oyster house. If you are not a good judge of oysters you will eat them with your wine and go away without asking my questions.

"The only really genuine thing about them is the shells. The manufacturers, I was told, buy second-hand shells from the restaurant keepers at a small expense, and with a harmless and tasteless paste fasten the spurious oyster in its place. Only one-half a shell is used for the purpose, and in that shape the fraud oysters are packed in tiers in boxes and baskets, which are displayed in windows, on counters, or on shelves. Others, to be served without the shells, are put up in cans, or in glass jars, containing from 25 to 100. The "imitations" are consumed in such large quantities that the dealers in real oysters are urging the restaurant and hotel keepers to break up their shells as fast as their contents are eaten, and even pay the cooks and waiters liberally to pound them to pieces, so that the makers of the artificial article will have a limited supply of shells."—Washington Star.

Our Easy Language.

"Johnny, do you know where those pills are that were on my closet shelf?"

"Yes, ma; I took them."

"You took them; what do you mean? How many did you take?"

"I didn't take any; I gave them to sister to take, but nurse took them away from her, so she didn't take any."

NEW EVERY MORNING.

Every day is a fresh beginning.
Every day is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you—
A hope for me and a hope for you.

All the past things are past and over,
The tasks are done and the tears are shed;
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted
and bled,
Are healed with the healing which night
has shed.

Yesterday now is a part of forever,
Bouned up in a sheaf, which God holds tight;
With glad days, and sad days, and bad days which never Shall visit us more with their bloom and their blight,
Their fullness of sunshine or sorrowful night.

Let them go, since we cannot relieve them,
Cannot undo and cannot stone;
God in His mercy receive, forgive them;
Only the new days are our own.
To-day is ours, and to-day alone.

Here are the skies all burnished brightly,
Here is the spent earth all reborn.
Here are the tired limbs springing lightly
To face the sun and to share with the morn,
The chrism of dew and the cool of dawn.

Every day is a fresh beginning;
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain,
And spite of old sorrow, of older sinning,
And puzzles foreseen and possible pain,
Take heart with the day, and begin again.

CHAPTER IV.

When Warrenton left Whidby he went downstairs. He knew the room where Whidby had slept the previous night, but he found the door closed and locked.

Hearing the voices of the undertaker and his men in Strong's room, he entered it. The men looked up from the coffin at him, and Hodson, the undertaker, bowed and said good morning as Warrenton approached and looked at the dead man's face.

"I've never seen anything like that smile, colonel," said Hodson, "and I've been in this business over 20 years. It was all I could do to get my men to go to work when they first saw him. We tried to close his eyes; but the lids are as stiff as whalebone."

The colonel shuddered at the coarseness of the man's words.

"How do you explain the smile?" he asked.

"I can't explain it at all," answered the undertaker. "I don't think such a thing ever happened before."

Warrenton bent over the coffin for a moment. "It seems to me to be a genuine smile, unmixed with any sensation of pain, or even surprise."

"He was laughing, colonel, if ever a man laughed in his life. I ain't particularly superstitious. I once unscrewed a cap and let a man out that had passed for dead 36 hours. I was alone with it at midnight. You can bet that gave me a shock; but, frankly, I'd hate to spend a night with this one."

"Whidby slept in that room, didn't he?" asked the lawyer, glancing indifferently towards the portiere.

"Yes, sir, but the indications are that the dead was done very quietly. Perhaps Mr. Whidby was drugged."

Hodson turned to give some orders to his men. The colonel went into Whidby's room and let the curtain fall behind him. The room had not been put to rights. A chair stood between the portiere and the bed. Its back was towards him. Warrenton listened. Hodson was still talking to his men, and the colonel could hear them using their tack-hammers. Quickly and stealthily he stepped to the chair and turned its back to the light from the window. He found what he feared was there—a faint smear of blood just where Whidby had caught the chair with his right hand.

"Enough to draw the halter around his neck," thought the lawyer. "I hope it escaped that detective's eye." He had just replaced the chair, when the portiere was drawn back and Hodson looked in.

"I beg pardon, colonel, but Capt. Welsh asked me to allow no one to come in here. I thought you went into the hall."

"I was just wondering how Whidby could have slept so soundly unless he was drugged," said the colonel. "I would not have come in if I had thought it was forbidden. Whidby and I are so intimate, you know, I feel as if I were at home here."

"Oh, no harm done," said the undertaker, as he held the curtain aside for Warrenton to pass out.

The colonel went into the hall and turned into the parlor. Here he looked about aimlessly for a moment, and then, seeing an open door which led to the servants' rooms in the rear, he passed out.

In a little room adjoining the kitchen he found Matthews.

"I want to see you, Matthews," said the colonel. "I want to ask you some questions. Mr. Whidby is so excited and upset that I don't wish to disturb him, and yet I must get some light on this subject."

"I don't know much about it, sir," replied the gardener. "I've told all I know to the lawyer."

The colonel sat down on a window-sill and lighted a cigar.

"You can trust me, you know, Matthews. I am an old friend of the family."

"Oh, I know that, sir, well enough."

"You have been in Mr. Strong's service a long time, Matthews, and you may now remember some things that you did not think of when you were testifying. For instance, have you any recollection of ever having seen anything which might tend to show that Mr. Strong had an enemy?"

Matthews stared at the lawyer for a moment in silence and then sat down on a chair and folded his hands nervously over his knees.

"I can't say I have, colonel," he said; "and yet—well, you know, my master was a very excitable, suspicious sort of a man."

"I never knew that."

"Well, he was, sir. He used to have spells of it, sir—spells I call 'em. He didn't seem able to sleep well at times. He has once in awhile had me sleep on the floor at the foot of his bed."

"Ah! Is that so?"

"Not often, sir, but perhaps twice a year, or thereabouts."

"Do you recall anything that might have caused him uneasiness at those times?"

"Well, I did have a sort of idea that he might 'a' brought home some money and was afraid o' bein' robbed of it."

"Can you remember ever having seen anyone about just before or after those spells?"

Matthews was silent, deep in thought, for a moment, then he said:

"Yes, I do remember somethin' rather odd, sir. It was when Mr. Whidby was at the seashore in the summer, and master was makin' me sleep in his room every night while he was gone. One evenin' master told me he was lookin' for a visitor to see him on important business, and that I was to stay back here till he left."

"Did you see the man?"

"Yes, sir. I opened the door when he rang."

"How did he look?"

"Very queer-lookin' individual, sir, it struck me. He looked like he might be a drinkin' man. He was tall and thin, and had dark eyes and white hair. He was so queer-lookin', sir, that I thought strange o' master havin' an appointment with him. To tell the truth, sir, I kinda thought it might be some poor relation in trouble, that master didn't care for people to see about. I showed him into the parlor and went back into the kitchen. About 15 minutes after that I thought I heard loud words and a scrambin' o' feet in the parlor. Their voices would sink down and then rise up again like they was quarrelin'. I was frightened, but was afraid o' displeasein' master if I went in, so I just come as far as the room next to the parlor."

"Did you then hear anything?"

"They kept it up, sir. Master seemed to be arguin' with him in a low, steady voice, and the stranger would break in and beat the table with his fist. Once I heard him say he wanted half of somethin', and just after master answered I heard blows and the fallin' o' chairs. I thought I had waited as long as I could, and, grabbin' a old pistol that I always kept by me, I rushed in. Master was on one side of the room, behind a sofa, and the fellow was holdin' a chair by the back and just about to raise it. When he saw me and my pistol he put down the chair, and, with an oath, backed out of the room. I followed him as far as the front door and saw him spring over the fence and walk away quick."

"Then I went back to master. To my surprise, he was tryin' to smile if nothin' had happened; but he was as white as a ghost. For a minute he couldn't say a word. Presently he said:

"'Rather nasty temper he has, Matthews. My friend was a little upset, but he would have come around all right. You frightened him away with that pistol.'

"' Didn't he strike you, master?' I asked. 'I thought I heard you fightin'.' And then I noticed a bruised spot on his forehead which showed mighty plain under his white hair an' on his pale skin. He saw me lookin' at it, and put his hand over it, but he was so excited he couldn't keep from showin' that he didn't want to let me know what the cause of the trouble was."

"' That fellow was drunk,' master said. 'I think his mind is wrong, too, a little. Yes, he did strike me, and I reckon you were right to come when you did.'

"Then he asked me if I was sure my pistol was loaded, and told me to sleep in his room, and see that the windows and all the doors were locked."

"Was that all?" asked the colonel, deeply interested.

"Yes, sir, except he made me promise not to mention the affair to Mr. Whidby by no one else. I'm sure he didn't sleep a wink that night, for I heard him rollin' and tumblin' in bed, an' he'd get up every now and then and cautiously look out of the window."

"After that, did you see anything to indicate that Mr. Strong was ever frightened or greatly excited about anything?"

"Nothin', sir, except he bought a fine watchdog, the one that died last winter, you know. He was always interested in him, and particular about leavin' him unchained at night. Then I do seem to remember that now and then master would get a letter that would excite him somewhat. They always came in strange-looking blue envelopes. Once when I gave him one at breakfast he turned pale when he opened it, and didn't finish eatin'."

Col. Warrenton rose and knocked the ashes from his cigar.

"I've got an appointment downtown," he said. "See here, Matthews, don't say anything about what you have told me. I am investigating a little on my own account in this matter and I don't want anyone to know it. Hold your tongue, and I'll see that you don't lose anything by it."

A few minutes later the colonel was in his office downtown. He had just begun the dictation of a letter to his stenographer when he heard the cry of a newsboy in the street.

"Extra! Extra Morning News! New developments in the Leighton avenue murder case! Extra! Extra!"

The colonel went to the door quickly, and returned reading a newspaper still damp from the press. Under large, sensational headlines he read a detailed account of a circumstance that seemed to bear strongly on the murder of the night before. No less than 25 typewritten notes had been picked up in different parts of the city early that morning; they had been found on the sidewalks, under the doors of private residences, in the yards of unoccupied houses, in the mail boxes by letter-carriers, behind the counters of shops, and one in the coat pocket of Mr. William Roundtree, the mayor, who had declared to a reporter that it must have been put there while he was wearing the coat.

The wording of all the notes was exactly the same, and ran as follows: "Nobody will ever discover who murdered Richard N. Strong. It will be useless to try. The secret lies in the smile on the dead man's face. Who put it there and how was it done? These questions will remain unanswered till the end of time. But this is not all. Before long others will

ONE WHO KNOWS HIS BUSINESS."

Col. Warrenton hurriedly read the rest of the sensational article, then threw aside the paper, and went down the street for two or three squares and up to the office of the mayor. He sent in his card, and was admitted at once. Mr. Roundtree was writing at his desk, but he rose and drew a chair near him for his friend to sit down.

"I just ran in to see about that note you got," said the lawyer. "Is it a fact that you found it in your pocket?"

The mayor thrust his right hand into the pocket of his sack coat. "It put it right there, colonel. I could show it to you, but I sent it to the police. I thought it was the only one till I read the extra just now."

"How could it have got into your pocket?" asked Warrenton. "Have you been in any crowds to-day?"

"Several, as it happened. At the post office this morning there were a great many people waiting for the mail. I stopped at the Imperial hotel in a crowd of politicians, and at the corner of Main and Broad streets I was in a crowd around the driver of a cab who had been thrown against a lampost and considerably injured. It could have been put into my pocket at any one of those places without my knowing it."

"What do you think ought to be done?" asked the colonel.

"I think the villain ought to be run down at all costs," was the reply. "I have just sent out a circular to be posted, in which I offer in the name of the city, $5,000 for his capture."

"A good idea," said Warrenton. "Do you know this detective Hendricks?"

"By reputation only. I understand he is the sharpest fellow alive in his particular line. I am glad he happened to be in town. You know he refused to come here just after the McDougal murders, he has so much to do in the larger cities. But I think he's interested in this case. They say he's like a bloodhound; when he smells blood he can't stop till he has run something down. By the way, he has bound us to secrecy. He says he will drop the case the moment it gets into the papers that he is here."

"So Welsh said. I would not have mentioned it to you, but he told me you had given your consent to Hendricks being employed."

deep into psychical phenomena to get at the mystery."

"Hush, Lilian; I don't like to hear you talk that way," said Mrs. Roundtree. "I have never approved of your reading the books you read."

COOKING BREAKFAST BACON.
How to Do It in Different Ways and Do It Right.

The secret of cooking breakfast bacon so it will be a "delicate light-brown, dry and crisp," consists first, in cutting it thin, then in having it ice-cold when it is put in the pan, which must be hot, yet not red-hot. Shake the pan rapidly while the bacon is cooking; toss the bacon over. It will crisp into rolls in two or three minutes and will then be ready to use as a garnish. The pan should be hot enough to burn the bacon unless it is kept moving. The bacon should be so chilled that it is firm enough for a keen-edged knife to cut it in waferlike slices.

Some cooks prefer to broil bacon. Then simply lay the slices in an oyster broiler and broil them for two minutes on each side, turning them and lifting them if the fat drips. It is also especially necessary to have the dampers of the stove open, as it always is necessary in broiling anything. The smoke of dripping fat is thus drawn away from the meat.

Careful cooks bone their bacon. They keep the "side" wrapped in cloth and hang it up in the cellar, or some cold place, where they can cut slices from it as they need it.

Slices of bacon are served with veal cutlets, calf's liver, chicken liver and many meats. Chicken livers rolled in oil or melted butter, seasoned with salt and pepper and then rolled in fine breadcrumbs make a delicious supper or breakfast dish when garnished with bacon. Broil them for five minutes after flattening them a little. Spread half a teaspoonful of maître d'hôtel butter on each liver after it is cooked, garnished with a crisp slice of bacon.

Chicken livers can be procured by the dozen in the largest markets. Broiled squab, quail, grouse, woodcock and other birds are properly sliced with a garnish of bacon. Almost any fried fish is appropriately served with this garnish. Dainty little crisped rolls of bacon are a most excellent accompaniment to a dish of perfectly fried golden-brown fishballs. Fishballs, properly cooked and seasoned, is not a dish for an epicure to sneer at. It may well hold its own place as an American dish when the American housewife may well be proud of when it is properly served; but as it is frequently put on the table it deserves all the contempt implied in the term "codfish aristocracy."

Not every housekeeper knows the delicious salad which may be made of bacon cut in dice-shaped pieces, fried brown and used with dandelion or chickory leaves. Prepare a quart of bleached leaves. After washing, rinsing and draining them thoroughly, put them in a salad bowl. Take two thin slices of bacon and cut them into small dice. Put them in a hot frying-pan and toss them until they are well cooked and a rich brown. Drain them from the fat that has fried out. Lay them for an instant on coarse brown paper to absorb the fat. Toss them with the salad leaves, which must be properly seasoned with salt and pepper, and finally add two tablespoonsfuls of sharp vinegar. Toss the salad well and serve it. No game cook can consider herself an expert unless she knows how to crisp properly the garnish of bacon, which is so necessary an accompaniment of a broiled bird.—N. Y. Tribune.

WITH AUTUMN LEAVES.

They May Be Used for Winter Decorations.

Gather a basket of the prettiest leaves—scarlet, yellow, russet and green—and gloss them by pressing gently with a warm flatiron which has been rubbed with white wax. A box of these waxed leaves are beautiful for winter decorations. Where one is too busy to wax every leaf, a good plan is to gather sprays of the finest leaves and put them to press in the bottom of a trunk or chest. It will only take a moment to spread a newspaper over them and then replace the weight of linen or clothing, which will press them smooth.

To decorate a room, take sheets of tissue paper, in warm brown or yellow tints, and crimp them by crushing and running lightly through the hands. Tack these sheets on the wall in the shape of a panel, and arrange carefully on it one or two choice unmounted photographs. Brown prints of madonnas are lovely on these panels, and cherub faces are always effective. When the photographs have been carefully put in place with the tiniest little tacks, fasten up your leaves with the points all sweeping one way, as if they were drifting across the panel in the wind. In brown, yellow and crimson tints the effect of this shower of leaves is so restful and beautiful it is as if a little bit of autumn frolic and sunshine were painted on the wall.

A pretty letter case can be made of pasteboard and canvas covered with oak leaves in old rose tints; and some dark November morning, when the snow is flying, pin your red and yellow leaves to the white sash curtains, and see how it will brighten the room.—Frances Bennett Callaway, in Farm and Fireside.

Cooked Horseradish.

Have ready one pint of grated horseradish. Melt in a saucepan butter the size of an egg and add one tablespoonful of flour, one pint of vinegar (or part water if vinegar is too sour), one teaspoonful of salt. Let boil and add the radish; cook five or ten minutes, according to strength desired. If too thick, add more vinegar. Turn into glasses and when cold pour with cold vinegar. This will keep well if you have plenty of it. Put some in the cellar for winter use in moist earth and prepare when wanted.—Housekeeper.

Apple Pineapple.

Beat two eggs until light; add one pint of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and sufficient flour to make a smooth, thin drop batter. Add one teaspoonful of sugar and one cupful of fine, chopped apple, two teaspoonsfuls of baking powder and bake on a hot griddle. Dust with sugar before serving.—N. Y. Ledger.

A HELPLESS FARMER.

William Simpson Stricken with Paralysis of His Lower Limbs—Caused by Overwork.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind. Many of our readers may remember an item in this paper a year ago last fall which stated that Mr. William Simpson, a well-to-do farmer, living near Rugby, Ind., had been stricken with paralysis of the lower limbs, and his recovery was doubtful.

The case which was an unusually severe and complicated one has at last been entirely cured, to the utmost surprise and joy of Mr. Simpson and his family.

Mr. Simpson was pleased to relate to a reporter the particulars regarding his case, and his subsequent recovery.

"A year ago last fall," began Mr. Simpson, "I do not know exactly. My hired help left me in the middle of corn cutting, and I finished the fall work myself, doing an unusual large amount of work. I put up several hundred bushels of fodder, and also husked all my corn. To accomplish this I had to work early and late.

"About the first of December, as I was getting my fall work about done, I suffered a stroke of paralysis, which the physician said was brought on by excessive labor. My left limb was fast becoming so. My physician became uneasy, and after attending upon me for a week or so, he brought me a box of Dr. W. E. Ayer's Pills for Pale People, saying that he believed they would do me more good than anything which I knew of as he had used them with great success in a case very similar to mine where all other remedies had failed. The case in question was that of L. Phillips, of Petersville.

"About the time I began taking the second box of these pills a decided change was noticed, and when I had taken two more boxes we discovered that I was actually getting well. You can probably imagine what a relief and feeling of gladness this was to me, after being confined to my bed for nearly two months. Well, I kept on taking the pills according to directions, until I had taken six boxes of them, which completely cured me."

"Another thing. In the old days the French was a gentle deception. A man who ordered pommes de terre, say, was willing to pay a quarter for them, but he would have kicked like a mule to be called upon to pay that much for potatoes. People are eating roast beef and beefsteak now, and French dishes don't go. I guess the nation is getting more and more to have pride in America and all things that are American."—Cincinnati Commercial Telegraph.

FRENCH MENUS.

They Are a Thing of the Past, and English Is Now Used.

A gentleman who had noted the tendency upon the part of the restaurateurs of late to have their menu entirely in English, asked me one day what about the change from the old way, when French was the popular form for every menu in first-class establishments. He said:

"A change of time and a change of taste. There was a time when restaurants could charge very big prices. It was in good times, and people didn't care much what they paid so that the service was up to the very best. Then we put the bill of fare in French as a gentle deception. Few could read French, and when they ordered pommes de terre they were under the impression they were getting a French dish when, in fact, they were getting plain everyday mushies with the jackets on."

"I remember many funny cases. At one time I had a couple of young people at a table and at the close of the meal they ordered cafe au lait, just because they thought it was the name of the drink. When they were served with coffee and cream they were surprised, and the waiter said the girl said to her beau: 'Well, I know enough French now to know that caf au lait is coffee. It won't take me long to learn French, Willie, if you keep coming here.'

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and the mucous lining can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

PARROTS HAD THE LAUGH.

Instructor of Infants Meets Difficulties in the Park Zoo.

She was a ruin, close-fisted-looking young woman in a dark dress, and as she walked through the Lincoln park zoo with a body guard of ten mild little girls explaining matters generally, the monkeys yawned and munured with that tired feeling:

"Kindergarten—seen 'em before."

She paused before the parrot's cage, adjusted her eyeglasses on her classic nose, and prepared to enlighten the innocent mind of youth.

"These are parrots, girls. Mamie may spell parrot."

"P-a-r-r-o-t," spelled one of the small maidens.

"Rot," Mamie, "rot," said the fair Minerva, serenely.

Rot, Mamie, rot, rot, rot," yelled the little gray parrot, fat and round, and a sympathetic chorister took up the strain. Minerva reddened, and the maidens giggled.

"How annoying!" she went on.

"These birds, girls, have the power of articulation and if carefully instructed are capable of almost perfect enunciation; but while possessing this gift of mimicry, they have no reason to guide the import of their utterances as the human consciousness has, and consequently are unable to converse intelligently, being simply echoes so far as speaking is concerned."

The big green and red parrot stood on another leg and eyed Minerva with microscopic scrutiny.

"You understand," she continued, "they have no mind and consequently no personality. When you look at them, the natural state they are as other birds; but when they begin to associate with human beings they rapidly acquire the use of the peculiarly shaped larynx, which, as science tells us, enables them to articulate. The theory has been propounded that at the time of protoplasm."

But Polly felt ill with baleful resentment. "O, rot!" he broke out. "You ain't nice."

And the gray parrot laughed in diabolical glee as the kindergarteners were hastily led to where the canaries warbled.—Chicago Tribune.

AN INSPIRATION.

She Would Show Her Strawberry Mark for Identification.

"There," she said as she finally got the check properly indorsed, and handed it to the paying teller; "I'd like to have the money, please."

The young man scanned it carefully, and then looked up.

"Is there anything wrong with it?" she inquired, apprehensively.

"No; I am sure it's all right. Only we have our rules here, and before we can let you have the money you will have to be identified."

"But the friends I am visiting took a trip into the country with my mother this morning."

"Then you will have to wait till to-morrow."

"But I need the money to do some shopping with this afternoon."

"I'm very sorry."

"It's absolutely necessary to be identified," she asked, plaintively.

"Absolutely."

"Well, I suppose I can manage it. Will the bank be open for an hour?"

"Yes."

"Then I'll hurry home and put on my evening gown. It's a great deal of trouble, but it's the only way, and I'm glad I happened to think of it."

"I don't quite understand."

"Why, I have a strawberry mark on my right shoulder, and everybody who has read anything at all knows that there isn't any better identification than a strawberry mark."—Washington Star.
